Summary

UK Parliament and Government

There are 209 women Members of the House of Commons. At 32%, this is an all-time high. The proportion of women grew slowly until the 1990s, as shown in the table below.

Since 1918, 491 women have been elected to the House of Commons; 58% were first elected as Labour MPs and 29% as Conservatives.

There are 206 female Peers – 26% of the Members of the House of Lords.

Five of the current members of the Cabinet (22%) are women, including the Prime Minister. The highest proportion of women in Cabinet was 36% between 2006 and 2007.

Devolved legislatures and local government

47% of Members of the National Assembly for Wales are women, as are 35% of Members of the Scottish Parliament and 32% of Members of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

About 34% of local authority councillors in England are women. 26% of councillors in Northern Ireland are women, while the proportion rose to 29% in Scotland after the 2017 elections and sits at 28% in Wales.

40% of members of the London Assembly are women.

European Parliament

40% of UK Members of the European Parliament (MEPs) in 2018 were women. 36% of all MEPs were women and the UK ranked 8th among the 28 EU member nations.

International comparisons

22 countries currently have a woman as president or prime minister, a record high. At 32%, the UK is in 39th position in the proportion of women in the lower (or only) house of parliament. Rwanda has over 61%, and along with Cuba and Bolivia has a majority of women in parliament.

1. UK Parliament

As of March 2019, 209 Members of the House of Commons are women. This is a record high, and 32% of all MPs. 208 were elected during the 2017 General Election, up from 191 in 2015. The two by-elections held in 2018 were both won by women.

Women MPs by party (at election) included 119 Labour MPs, 67 Conservative and 12 SNP. 45% of Labour MPs, 21% of Conservative MPs and 34% of SNP MPs were women.<sup>1</sup>

As of March 2019, 206 (26%) of the 782 Members of the House of Lords are women.<sup>2</sup> Women were first admitted in 1958 and the proportion of women has varied with reforms over time. It had reached 20% by January 2009.<sup>3</sup>

The chart below summarises women's membership of both chambers.

1.1 Members of Parliament since 1918

491 women have been elected as Members of the House of Commons since first being permitted to stand in 1918.<sup>4</sup>

In that year Countess Constance Markievicz was elected to represent Dublin St Patricks, but as a member of Sinn Féin she did not take her seat. The next year Nancy Astor became the first woman to sit in the Commons after winning a by-election in Plymouth Sutton for the Conservatives.

Of the 491 women MPs ever elected, 284 (58%) were first elected as Labour and 140 (29%) as Conservative MPs. A full breakdown appears in the table below.

Until 1997 women had never made up more than 10% of all MPs; until the late 1980s the proportion had always been below 5%. The proportion rose to 18% following the 1997 General Election when 120 women were elected. The current level – 32% – is the highest ever. The chart below shows the increase since 1979.

1.2 Candidates in general elections

The number of women candidates has risen at almost every general election since 1966. The exceptions were 2001, when there were 36 fewer than in 1997, and in 2017, when 60 fewer women stood than in

6 Women in parliament and government

2015. In the latter case, though, the proportion of female candidates rose as there were fewer candidates overall.

The chart below shows how the number has increased since 1979.

Women were first able to stand for Parliament in 1918, when 17 did so. There was one female Conservative candidate, four Labour, four Liberal Democrat and eight other.

Women did not make up more than 10% of candidates until 1979, when 11% of candidates were female. In 2005 the proportion of women reached 20% for the first time.

The 2017 General Election

In 2017 973 women candidates stood across all parties – 29% of all 3,304 candidates. Although this is the highest proportion on record, the total number of women candidates was lower than the 1,033 who stood in 2015.

Labour had 256 women candidates, the highest number of any party in any general election. 41% of Labour's candidates were women, compared with 34% in 2015.

184 (29%) Conservative candidates were women – a 3 percentage point increase on 2015 and the highest number in the party's history. Similarly, 184 (29%) of Liberal Democrat candidates were women.

35% of Green Party candidates were women, as were 34% of Scottish National Party and 28% of Plaid Cymru candidates. Women made up 13% of UKIP candidates.<sup>5</sup>

2. UK Government

In July 2016, Theresa May became the second female Prime Minister of the UK. Currently there are five women in the Cabinet (including the Prime Minister), which is 22% of the 23 cabinet posts.<sup>6</sup> As four of the six ministers who also attend are women, 31% of all those who attend Cabinet are women.

Of 120 Government Ministers and Whips, 38 (32%) are women.<sup>7</sup>

In 2015 David Cameron appointed seven women to Cabinet; this was 30% (of 22 cabinet posts plus the Prime Minister). Three of the eight ministers who also attended Cabinet were women. In 2010, David Cameron's first Cabinet included four women.

There were five women in Tony Blair's 1997 Cabinet, which was also the first to include more than two female ministers at one time. The highest number of concurrent women cabinet ministers was eight (36%), from May 2006 to May 2007.

The table below shows the 45 women who have ever been appointed to cabinet posts. The first was Margaret Bondfield in 1929. She had already been the first female minister outside the Cabinet.

3. Other elected bodies in the UK

3.1 Devolved legislatures

Since devolved legislatures were established from the late 1990s, women have generally made up 30 to 40% of members after each election. Notable variations are the Northern Ireland Assembly, where female membership has risen from 13% in 1998 to 32% in 2019, and the National Assembly for Wales, where at least 40% of AMs have always been women. Indeed, after a by-election in 2006, 31 out of 60 AMs – 52% – were women.<sup>8</sup>

The current proportion of women is as follows:

- Scottish Parliament: 35%
- National Assembly for Wales: 47%
- Northern Ireland Assembly: 32%.

The chart below presents the proportion of women in these bodies by party.

3.2 Other elected bodies

Ten (40%) of members of the London Assembly are women (as also presented in the chart below).<sup>9</sup>

Following elections in 2016, of 40 elected Police and Crime Commissioners in England, 8 (20%) were women.<sup>10</sup>

3.3 Local government

England

The Local Government Association reported that in 2013, 31.9% of local authority councillors in England were women, as shown in the

6. International context

6.1 Presidents and prime ministers

As of February 2019 a woman holds the post of president or prime minister in 22 (11%) of the 193 member countries of the United Nations.<sup>18</sup>

This equals the previous record set in 2017. As recently as 2005, there were only eight.<sup>19</sup>

14 Women in parliament and government

The first non-hereditary female national leader was Sirimavo Bandaranaike, elected Prime Minister of Ceylon (now Sri Lanka) in 1960.

International progress was slow until the 1990s. By February 2019, 70 countries (just over a third of all) had had at least one female president or prime minister. A handful had had several. Sri Lanka was the first country to have a female president and prime minister at the same time (from 1994).<sup>20</sup> The table below lists the first woman to become a president or prime minister in each country.

6.2 Overseas parliaments

Speakers of national parliaments

In February 2019, 54 women presided over one of the 222 national houses of parliament throughout the world, therefore making up 24%

of all speakers. In two countries – the Netherlands and Trinidad and Tobago – women presided over both houses.<sup>21</sup>

In 1927 Austria became the first country to elect a woman to the presidency of a parliamentary chamber; the next was Denmark in 1950. To date women have held one of those positions in 98 countries.

The UK became the 27th country to achieve this when Betty Boothroyd was elected Speaker of the House of Commons in 1992.

The following table shows the dates when the first woman became speaker or presiding officer in a national parliament.

Entry of women into national parliaments

Nineteen women were elected in Finland in 1907, the first election after suffrage was extended to women in 1906. In doing so they became the first women ever to sit in a parliament. They made up 9.5% of the elected members, a level that the UK had still not reached in 1992.<sup>23</sup>

About the Library

The House of Commons Library research service provides MPs and their staff with the impartial briefing and evidence base they need to do their work in scrutinising Government, proposing legislation, and supporting constituents.

As well as providing MPs with a confidential service we publish open briefing papers, which are available on the Parliament website.

Every effort is made to ensure that the information contained in these publicly available research briefings is correct at the time of publication. Readers should be aware however that briefings are not necessarily updated or otherwise amended to reflect subsequent changes.

If you have any comments on our briefings please email papers@parliament.uk. Authors are available to discuss the content of this briefing only with Members and their staff.

If you have any general questions about the work of the House of Commons you can email hcenquiries@parliament.uk.
